THE DEPUTY CLERK: Civil Action 21-1371,
Mark Lenzi versus United States Department of State, et al.

Would counsel please note their appearances for the record. Would counsel note their appearances for the record.

MR. SUAREZ: Good morning, Your Honor. This is Christopher Suarez from Steptoe & Johnson on behalf of the plaintiff, Mr. Mark Lenzi.

MS. FISCH: Good morning, Your Honor. Kate Fisch of Steptoe & Johnson on behalf of plaintiff, Mark Lenzi.

MR. BARBA: Thomas Barba, Steptoe & Johnson, here for Mark Lenzi.

THE COURT: Good morning.

MR. BARBA: Good morning.

MR. MEZGER: Good morning, Your Honor.
Matthew Mezger from the United States Attorney's Office on behalf of defendants. I'm joined today by Ms. Catherine Yang from the Federal Programs Branch. She'll be arguing before the Court today. And Ms. Laura Wetzler, civil chief of the U.S. Attorney's Office.

THE COURT: Good morning. Okay. I believe this is your motion.

MS. YANG: Thank you, Your Honor. Good morning.

THE COURT: Good morning.

1 MS. YANG: This is an action against the State
2 Department alleging failure to accommodate, disability
3 discrimination and retaliation under the Rehabilitation Act,
4 as well as a separate claim of a First Amendment violation 5 arising out of the federal employment.

6 As Your Honor is aware from the briefs, defendants 7 have moved to dismiss the Rehab Act claims for failure to 8 state a claim, and the First Amendment claim for lack of 9 jurisdiction. Our position is laid out fully in the briefs,
10 so, for today, I'll just highlight the top line reasons why 11 we believe each claim should be dismissed.

12 So starting first with the Rehab Act failure to 13 accommodate claim. We presented numerous reasons in our 14 briefs why this claim should be dismissed; today I'll just 15 focus on two.

16 The first is that plaintiff did not exhaust his 17 administrative remedies for this claim. There's no
18 indication in the administrative materials that he raised a 19 failure to accommodate claim in those proceedings. And 20 failure to accommodate is analytically and legally distinct 21 from a claim of disparate treatment or disability or 22 discrimination. They involve different elements, different 23 actors, and so many courts across many circuits have held 24 that you don't exhaust one by simply alleging the other.

25 Several cases from within the Fourth Circuit that

1 I think are particularly illustrative of that is the Cox
2 case coming out of South Carolina and the Rankin case coming 3 out of Maryland.

4 The second reason that the failure to accommodate 5 claim should be dismissed is that plaintiff focuses on the 6 idea of overseas assignments as an alleged accommodation, 7 but critically, he doesn't allege that an overseas
8 accommodation would be needed to accommodate any limitations 9 associated with his disability.

10 The purpose of the Rehab Act is to accommodate 11 mental or physical limitations that arise from someone's 12 disability so that they can do their job. And so, for 13 example, if someone has a disability that causes them severe 14 headaches, and that can be accommodated by limiting their 15 screen time, you know, that's the kind of thing -- the kind 16 of causal connection between accommodation and a disability 17 limitation that's required. And I think the Hamill case of 18 Maryland explains this requirement very clearly.

19 So here, the limitations that plaintiff alleges 20 from his disability are things like headaches, 21 sleeplessness, light sensitivity. Those are all things that 22 have nothing to do with overseas assignments. The fact -- 23 the geographic location of an assignment isn't going to 24 address whether someone suffers from headaches.

25 THE COURT: And when he was before the EEOC, he

1 did not identify the transfer or an overseas assignment as 2 an accommodation?

3 MS. YANG: Exactly. That's the failure to exhaust
4 issue that I discussed.

5 THE COURT: Right.

6 MS. YANG: So certainly we understand that 7 plaintiff may prefer to work abroad, but really that -- the 8 focus of the Rehab Act is asking what is an accommodation 9 that is actually going to address limitations associated 10 with a disability. And of course, as Your Honor noted, the 11 failure to exhaust issue is also a straightforward threshold 12 reason why this claim should be dismissed.

13 Moving on to --

14 THE COURT: And if we don't have that, we don't 15 even look at the second part of it.

16 MS. YANG: Exactly. Exactly.

17 Moving on to the Rehab Act disability
18 discrimination claim, as I understand it, plaintiff advances 19 two theories under this claim, the first being failure to 20 promote, and the second being the non-selection for four 21 overseas assignments: Frankfurt, Belgrade, Warsaw and 22 Athens.

23 So I'll start with the failure to promote. And 24 this claim, again, is easily dismissed because, just like 25 failure to accommodate, it wasn't exhausted. The

1 administrative materials, and even the allegations at 2 paragraphs 86 and 90 of the complaint make it very clear 3 that the scope of plaintiff's administrative complaint was 4 focused on the non-selection.

5 And I think particularly it's important in this 6 context within the foreign service to understand that 7 promotions and assignments are two completely separate 8 things by operation of statute. They have different 9 decision-makers, different processes, different 10 requirements, different criteria, timelines. And so that 11 kind of factual divergence between promotions and 12 assignments within the foreign service is exactly the kind 13 of divergence between claims that the Fourth Circuit 14 repeatedly has held in cases like Dennis and Chacko and 15 Evans, does not put the employer on notice of a claim. So 16 the failure to promote issue I think, again, is easily 17 discriminated for that reason.

18 Turning to the non-selections, which, again, are 19 regarding four overseas assignments, these claims I think 20 fail for three primary reasons, and the reasons apply 21 equally to each.

22 So the first is -- the first reason is that 23 plaintiff relies principally on allegations that the 24 department did not select him for each of these positions
25 "because of his disability." And there are several times

1 throughout the complaint where that language arises. But 2 Supreme Court and Fourth Circuit precedent is very clear
3 that those types of allegations, without additional factual 4 elaboration, are not given any credit, even on the motion to 5 dismiss stage.

6 THE COURT: But when you look at this in the 7 totality and you look at all these allegations and we're 8 taking them in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, 9 he's alleging that prior to this date, he was an exemplary 10 employee. He was able to work abroad fully.

11 After his injury, he was returned stateside. He 12 was put in this status that is supposed to be temporary, 13 but, for him, has lasted three years. He's applied for 14 these numerous assignments, and each time where he was 15 either the only person there, or even when there was a 16 second person there, this assignment is -- I don't know if 17 it's readvertised or reconfigured, but it's moved to an 18 entry-level position that he is no longer available for.
19 And the only thing that has changed is his -- his 20 disability.

21 And when we look at those facts and these 22 allegations, and there's also a memo there where he is -- 23 during the process where he is seeking -- and this may 24 relate more to your retaliation -- the retaliation claim 25 than the disparate treatment claim, but there's even a memo

1 that references his disability and the fact that he's been 2 speaking out about it.

3 When we read these facts -- or when I read these 4 facts in the light most favorable to the plaintiff, why 5 isn't that enough to get beyond -- I'm not getting to the 6 merits, but why isn't that enough to get beyond a motion to 7 dismiss?

8 MS. YANG: Certainly. And I think I'll structure 9 my response in three parts.

10 So the first part is to I think emphasize that a 11 discrete act claim is necessarily moored to a specific 12 adverse action. And so when we're looking to see whether a 13 particular action -- a particular employment action was 14 plausibly motivated by unlawful animus, we're looking at the 15 facts surrounding that particular claim. You know, and this 16 sort of makes sense logically, too, because you could have 17 four employment actions over time, right, but each one maybe 18 involved different decision-makers or different 19 circumstances, you know, different factual -- a different 20 factual circumstance.

21 And so, you know, while certainly you might 22 consider the overall -- you know, the breadth of those 23 allegations as part of background understanding, when you're 24 looking and analyzing whether someone has stated a 25 particular claim with respect to a specific action, you have

1 to look to see whether there are factual -- sufficient 2 factual allegations with respect to that action to infer 3 plausible unlawful animus with respect to that action. And 4 for the reasons that we explained in the papers, we think 5 that's missing here.

6 The second piece of my response, I think, is to 7 try to shed a little light on the overcomplement status
8 based on facts that are alleged in the complaint. And so 9 taking a step back, as Your Honor knows, employment within 10 the foreign service is assignment-based. And so, you know, 11 employees are assigned to one assignment, they perform that 12 assignment for the amount of time of the assignment, and 13 then they move on to their next assignment.

14 Because of that, when employees are between 15 regular assignments, the Department places them on 16 overcomplement status. This occurs across the board, and so 17 that could come up in a number of different ways.

18 So, for example, let's say that an employee has 19 completed -- you know, has completed or is very close to 20 completing their current assignment but haven't yet lined up 21 their next assignment, they would be placed on 22 overcomplement status for that interim time. Or you might 23 have a situation where the employee is, for whatever reason, 24 unable to complete their current assignment and move on to 25 their next assignment. During that interim period, they

1 would be placed on overcomplement. So, you know -- and that 2 is alleged in paragraph 79 of the complaint.

3 When people -- when employees are on 4 overcomplement status, they're given meaningful work, they 5 continue to receive performance evaluations, they continue
6 to be considered for promotion if they're otherwise
7 eligible. There's no impact on their pay, there is no
8 impact on their grade. Again, really, it is a temporary 9 designation when an employee is between assignments.

10 And because foreign service --

11 THE COURT: But he's been in it for three years.

12 MS. YANG: Certainly. And so -- and so because 13 overcomplement is intended to be temporary just for when 14 people are between regular assignments, when an employee 15 continues to remain unassigned for a certain amount of time, 16 the Department will then consider directing them to a 17 specific assignment because the Department has every 18 interest in making sure that its employees are in regular 19 assignments.

20 And so that's actually what happened here.
21 Plaintiff was placed in overcomplement after he was 22 voluntarily medevaced from his China assignment because he was 23 no longer able to do that assignment and wasn't able to 24 continue on to his next assignment, so he was placed on 25 overcomplement.

1 During that time, and while he was receiving
2 treatment in the United States, the Department gave him
3 domestic duties to perform so that he was still, you know, 4 doing work, earning his paycheck. And he alleges that he 5 took no issue with those domestic duties, at least 6 initially. And we see that at paragraphs 9 and 28 of the 7 complaint.

8 Plaintiff didn't then start applying for overseas 9 assignments until late 2019, late 2020. As we know, he 10 didn't get them, so he remained in overcomplement. Again, 11 overcomplement is what happens when you are in between 12 regular assignments.

13 Then in March of 2021, the Department said that if 14 he continued to be unassigned, they would consider directing 15 him into an assignment consistent with what I mentioned 16 earlier. That's at paragraph 77. And six months later when 17 he still wasn't in an assignment, the Department did just 18 that and directed him into a particular assignment. Again, 19 because the Department has every interest in making sure 20 that its employees are in regular assignments.

21 And so I certainly acknowledge that the length of 22 time that plaintiff was in overcomplement was approximately 23 three years or so, but, you know, that is an operation of 24 what happens by policy when a foreign service employee is 25 between regular assignments. And so, you know, the fact

1 that he wasn't able to find a regular assignment in the 2 meantime is simply, you know -- that is why we're focusing 3 on those particular assignment decisions in grounding our 4 analysis of the disparate treatment, discrimination claim.

5 And so the third piece -- the final piece of my 6 response to Your Honor's question is to return to those 7 particular four assignment decisions and explain that, you 8 know -- so A, there are a lot of allegations about how the 9 Department did not select him for those because of his 10 disability. We can disregard those because those are not 11 factual allegations.

12 The second attempt is to invoke these 13 similarly-situated comparators. But there's nothing in the 14 complaint that actually provides any factual elaboration 15 into who those purported people are, you know, anything to 16 allow us to infer whether or not those people are actually 17 plausibly similarly situated to allow for a meaningful 18 comparison. And when you take away those allegations that 19 are not to be credited, you are left with very few facts to 20 actually support a plausible inference of discrimination.

21 So just to take an example, the Warsaw assignment.
22 Plaintiff alleges only that that assignment was offered to 23 another bidder. That appears at paragraph 74. The fact 24 that the panel decided to go with someone else alone on 25 its -- you know, with no elaboration, that allegation is not

1 sufficient to give rise to a plausible inference of 2 discrimination.

3 And, similarly, you know, there are several 4 positions where plaintiff alleges that they were converted
5 to entry-level positions. Again, on its face, a conversion
6 to entry level has nothing to do with disability, 7 discrimination. And, in fact, you know, subscribing to 8 plaintiff's theory would require us to, you know, adopt the 9 view that the Department was willing to affect other 10 employees who had applied to those positions, apart from 11 plaintiff, by converting the whole thing to entry level.
12 And, you know, as it's pled, the complaint doesn't provide 13 the factual allegations to support that leap of logic.

14 And then -- so then turning to retaliation -- and 15 I'll address Your Honor's question about the statement about 16 media interviews. So I'll take that first.

17 So the statement that Your Honor mentioned is with 18 respect to the Belgrade position. And the statement 19 specifically was something to the effect of plaintiff 20 regularly conducts media interviews that are reported around 21 the world. Something to that effect.

22 THE COURT: In reference to -- according to the 23 complaint, it also references his disability.

24 MS. YANG: Correct. Correct.

25 And so I think there are two -- two main issues

1 with focusing on that allegation as suggestive of unlawful 2 animus.

3 The first is that that decision -- that statement
4 was actually made after the Belgrade assignment had already 5 been offered to someone else, and so the decision had been 6 made.

7 THE COURT: Right. But it was during the period
8 when he was requesting that they review.

9 MS. YANG: That's correct. Yes, that is true.
10 But I think the point that I'm trying to convey is that the 11 decision had already -- you know, the wheels of that 12 employment decision had already begun spinning. You know, 13 after the decision not to offer him that position was made, 14 he then instituted this appeal during which we have this 15 statement.

16 THE COURT: But if -- if that -- even if it's 17 after the decision is made and there is a statement like 18 that to the person who is supposed to reconsider it, could 19 that not be -- could there not be some animus involved in 20 even deciding not to reconsider it in making that decision?
21 Because, remember, I'm not looking at the merits; I'm just 22 looking at the allegation and read in the light most 23 favorable to the plaintiff.

24 MS. YANG: Right. I don't think there is, at 25 least to a plausible level, which is the level required for 1 pleading.

2 And the references that I go back to are the 3 Fourth Circuit authorities in Horne, Buchhagen and Francis, 4 among others in the briefs, that basically say when you have 5 an employment action already in process and then protected 6 activity occurs in the interim and then there's a final 7 decision, the fact that protected activity was injected into 8 the middle doesn't somehow transform the whole thing into a 9 retaliatory act, because that action was already -- you
10 know, had already been put into motion before the protected 11 activity. And so, you know, some of those -- some of those 12 cases arose in the context of what's known as a performance 13 improvement plan in the Federal Government. And so, 14 similarly, you know, that's a recommendation for an action 15 to be taken.

16 THE COURT: And as I sit here, I don't recall 17 whether or not those cases involved the dismissal stage or 18 the summary judgment stage.

19 MS. YANG: I believe Buchhagen was a dismissal -- 20 was affirming a motion to -- was affirming a dismissal of a 21 complaint at the pleading stage. I believe Francis was 22 summary judgment. And I can't remember off the top of my 23 head what Horne was. But I'm pretty sure that Buchhagen was 24 at the dismissal stage. And certainly there have been 25 District Court decisions since, you know, that trio that

1 have applied it at the dismissal stage. I don't think that 2 we cited those District Court decisions in our papers, but, 3 you know, certainly we would be happy to provide them if 4 that's useful. But there have certainly been District Court
5 decisions applying those decisions -- applying the Fourth 6 Circuit decisions at the dismissal stage.

7 And then finally, I think -- the final point that 8 I would make with respect to this alleged statement is that 9 statements by non-decision-makers are not considered direct 10 evidence of any kind of unlawful animus. Here, the 11 statement is attributed to plaintiff's career development 12 officer who I understand wrote some kind of background memo.

13 You know, so even if we're taking ourselves out of 14 the initial decision going to the appeal, it's not a 15 statement that can be attributed to the appeal authority.
16 And so I think for that additional reason, it's not terribly 17 probative of the issues that are actually properly before 18 the Court on a discrete act claim of either retaliation or 19 discrimination.

20 With respect to the other retaliation pieces, I'll 21 just briefly note I think two points. So, first, we're 22 generally dealing with two categories of protected activity, 23 the first being plaintiff's accommodation requests; and the 24 second being his EEO activity.

25 With respect to the accommodation request, it's 1 undisputed that there was a multi-year lag between when he 2 requested accommodations in 2018, when he later -- you know, 3 several years later, did not get the assignments that he 4 wanted. There's lots of case law that says that kind of 5 passage of time cannot support a plausible inference of 6 retaliation.

7 That's especially the case like, when here, the 8 Department continually provided him with accommodations 9 during that time. And so the Fourth Circuit explained in 10 the Hollestelle case. Other circuits have explained, as 11 cited in our papers, that when you have that kind of 12 extensive accommodation, that willingness to accommodate an 13 employee, you can't then turn around and say, actually, the 14 Department -- the employer was motivated to retaliate
15 against me for engaging -- for requesting that accommodation 16 when they demonstrated that willingness to engage with the 17 accommodation.

18 So that disposes, I think, of the -- of any 19 retaliation claim arising out of the accommodation request, 20 which then brings us to the EEO activity.

21 THE COURT: Are you about to address now the 22 retaliation with respect to the EEO activity?

23 MS. YANG: Exactly.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MS. YANG: Exactly. And so I think here there are

1 two main flaws in the allegations, at least as they've been 2 pled.

3 The first is that there's no allegation that any 4 decision-maker involved with any of the assignment decisions
5 knew about his EEO activity. There's none in the complaint.
6 And logically, you know, the Fourth Circuit has said that 7 you can't accuse someone of taking action against you 8 because of your protected activity if they didn't know about 9 your protected activity. It's just a logical fallacy to say 10 that you could otherwise.

11 The second piece is that, again, there are several 12 months to years that pass between the EEO activity and when 13 plaintiff didn't get an assignment that he wanted. The 14 specific timelines are set out in our briefs, so I won't go 15 through all that again. But, again, the Fourth Circuit has 16 said that a delay of even two months is too long to -- can 17 be too long to infer retaliatory motive. And that appears 18 in the Horne decision, which was two months, and Perry, 19 which was two to three months.

20 And I understand the plaintiff says there was 21 other evidence of retaliatory animus during this intervening 22 period, but as we've explained in the papers, he doesn't 23 actually plead any events that can reasonably be viewed as 24 being retaliatory.

25 THE COURT: But what about -- and I understand

1 respondent's position on the overcomplement status. So I
2 think I'm going to do this in two parts.

3 First, one, why isn't maintaining him in the 4 overcomplement status for that amount of time, why can't -- 5 why isn't that an adverse action? Because in his complaint, 6 he goes through and talks about what he's not receiving when 7 he's in the overcomplement status. Because he's not 8 overseas, he's not entitled to certain reimbursement that he 9 receives or certain increases. So why isn't just the 10 maintaining him in that overcomplement status, why can't 11 that alone be an adverse action?

12 And if it is, then we do have continued action, 13 even during the period where there's these EEO complaints.
14 Because there were -- I believe there were complaints in 15 June and July and August of 2020, and then there were 16 denials coming in October. And I know what you're talking 17 about, well there's -- you know, two-month delay is not 18 enough. But when you also have the continued period in that 19 overcomplement status, why isn't all of that read together?

20 MS. YANG: Certainly. So I'll take your first 21 question first about adverse action.

22 The reason the overcomplement status is not 23 considered an adverse action is because the Fourth Circuit 24 has drawn a very clear line, a very clear definition of what 25 constitutes an adverse action.

1 You know, I understand -- we've described in our 2 papers how the Department has taken a somewhat contrary view
3 with respect to transfers. But, respectfully, the binding
4 precedent is what it is, and that says that adverse actions 5 have to affect pay, have to affect, you know, your title or 6 your position. Something really significant, really 7 substantial.

8 THE COURT: And by pay, you mean actual salary as 9 opposed to what he says that he's losing in pay --

10 MS. YANG: Correct.

11 THE COURT: -- because he does say he is losing 12 money.

13 MS. YANG: Correct. I understand the allegation
14 to be that there are additional sort of ancillary benefits 15 associated with being in a foreign post, especially some 16 that are in tougher locations. But the base salary is the 17 same, and those sort of ancillary benefits -- you know, I 18 sort of analogize to thinking like differences in locality 19 pay for federal employees. You know, you're still within 20 your same grade level, you're still within your same grade 21 and step level, but you might be getting paid differently
22 depending on, you know, whether you're in Portland, Oregon 23 or the D.C. area. And so, you know, that's sort of in my 24 mind where I go with that.

25 Overcomplement doesn't change the grade level or

1 anything. Again, like I mentioned before, you're still 2 given meaningful work when you're in overcomplement. He 3 describes some of that work in his complaint. You're still 4 evaluated for your performance during that period. You're 5 still being considered for promotion if you're otherwise
6 eligible during that period. And, again, it's kind of a -- 7 it's an interim step between regular assignments that every 8 employee goes into.

9 THE COURT: Isn't adverse action, though, doesn't 10 it also include any kind of condition that you impose on an 11 employee that could cause a chilling effect and not want 12 them to, you know, proceed with other -- or file other 13 claims under the Rehab Act? Isn't that also part of the 14 definition of what an adverse action can be?

15 MS. YANG: Within discrimination claims, no. The 16 Fourth Circuit precedent is very clear that it has to be -- 17 it has to fall within the definition of cases like Holland
18 and others that we've cited.

19 In the retaliation context, you know, there's been 20 some debate over the last couple of years following the 21 Burlington Northern case, which I think is what Your Honor 22 was referencing. Respectfully, that case arose in the 23 private sector context, which is different from the -- which 24 deals with a different section of Title 7. I understand 25 that we're not talking about Title 7 here.

1 But Burlington Northern was interpreting a 2 different provision of Title 7 that applies specifically to 3 private sector employment. There's a completely separate 4 section that deals with public federal employment under 5 Title 7. And so, you know, our position is that the 6 Burlington Northern standard, while it might -- while it
7 does apply certainly to the private sector, there's been no
8 published Fourth Circuit decision saying that it equally 9 applies to federal sector employment.

10 THE COURT: Thank you.

11 MS. YANG: And then to -- so that's why the 12 overcomplement is not, itself, an adverse action; it's just 13 sort of a temporary place where you are when you're between 14 regular assignments.

15 And then to answer Your Honor's second question 16 about why this doesn't constitute, you know, continuing 17 retaliatory animus, again, I mentioned that this is just -- 18 this is a status that applies to anyone who's between 19 regular assignments. So it's not discretionary as to, you 20 know, if you're between regular assignments, we may or may 21 not put you in overcomplement. But I think the bigger 22 piece, especially for the retaliation claim, to consider is 23 that plaintiff was placed on overcomplement status in 24 October 2018. That is years before any of his protected 25 activity, certainly before -- you know, certainly well

1 before his EEO activity in June through August of 2020.

2 That is a very, very lengthy period of time.

3 And so, again, this brings me back to those Fourth 4 Circuit authorities that say when something -- when an 5 action has already occurred before protected activity and 6 then later on protected activity happens and the same action
7 continues throughout, you can't attribute retaliatory animus 8 to that action, because it was already in place before the 9 protected activity. And that's just the same case here with 10 that overcomplement status.

11 I think finally, and just very briefly, I will 12 address the First Amendment claim. And as Your Honor knows 13 from the papers, our position is that the Court lacks
14 jurisdiction over this claim because the Foreign Service Act 15 precludes the kind of standalone Constitutional claim that 16 plaintiff tries to bring here.

17 We describe the framework of the Foreign Service 18 Act in our briefs and why that sets out this comprehensive 19 scheme that precludes going beyond the statute for any 20 rights or remedies. And actually, plaintiff in his 21 opposition didn't contest any of that framework. So I think 22 that's, you know, very important to note.

23 It appears that what plaintiff is really saying is 24 that he spoke out about perceived disability discrimination, 25 how it was affecting his employment. But that kind of claim

1 is precluded precisely because it has to be brought under 2 the Rehabilitation Act. That's the whole reason why the 3 Rehab Act exists. And many courts have held that the Rehab 4 Act is the exclusive remedy for all claims arising out of 5 federal employment with regard to disability discrimination.
6 And of course he's brought that Rehab Act retaliation claim 7 here, so he can't tack on an additional Constitutional layer 8 to that same claim.

9 I wasn't quite clear from the opposition, but to 10 the extent that he also tries to argue that this whole line 11 of authority, including the Supreme Court decisions in 12 Fausto and Elgin are irrelevant, because, unlike those, he's 13 bringing dual discrimination and Constitutional claims --

14 THE COURT: But do we even get there? Because 15 he's asked for monetary judgment in reference to the First 16 Amendment claim.

17 MS. YANG: Right. Right. So he has asked for 18 both. He's asked for monetary relief, as well as equitable 19 relief.

20 THE COURT: But the equitable relief listed in the 21 complaint does not appear to go to the First Amendment
22 claim.

23 MS. YANG: I think that's an excellent point, Your 24 Honor. And as we discussed in our opening brief, certainly 25 any monetary claims against the Department and these federal

1 officials who are sued in their official capacities is off
2 the table immediately, because there's undisputedly been no
3 waiver of sovereign immunity for that kind of claim.

4 Your Honor correctly notes, I believe, that, you
5 know, there may not be a specific request for equitable 6 relief --

7 THE COURT: That specifically goes to the First
8 Amendment claim.

9 MS. YANG: Right. That specifically goes to the 10 First Amendment claim. So certainly that is an additional 11 thing to consider.

12 You know, litigants are limited by their 13 pleadings. They can't amend their complaint through 14 briefing or argument. But, you know, I just wanted to take 15 a step back, too, and say, you know, to the extent that 16 plaintiff wanted to try to amend his complaint to add on a 17 request for equitable relief specific to his First Amendment 18 claim, you know, that is also off the table for all the 19 reasons we've discussed in the briefs. You know, there's no 20 avenue for him to do that. Anything that's tied to his 21 Rehab Act claim has to be brought under the Rehab Act. Any 22 attempt to distinguish himself from the Elgin and the Fausto
23 line of cases is unsuccessful because that kind of mixed 24 discrimination and non-discrimination case that he describes 25 isn't available to -- isn't available to a foreign service

1 employee by operation of the CSRA and the FSA.

2 And so that sort of brings us directly into the 3 holding of Fausto, which is that when Congress decides to 4 exclude a certain category of people from an otherwise 5 comprehensive scheme, that exclusion has to be given 6 meaning, it's deliberate, and that person can't then go 7 around the statute and try to bring other claims some other 8 way.

9 So for all these reasons, we would ask for a 10 dismissal of the complaint, and, you know, we welcome any 11 questions that Your Honor may have.

12 THE COURT: Thank you.

13 MR. SUAREZ: Good morning, Your Honor. May it 14 please the Court. Again, this is Christopher Suarez from 15 Steptoe on behalf of plaintiff.

16 I think it's important to start in this case by 17 taking a bit of a step back and making two points before I 18 get to the individual counts.

19 The first is the standard of review. As Your 20 Honor noted, we're on a motion to dismiss, and it's about 21 whether we've pleaded a plausible claim as to each element, 22 which is an even lower bar than the prima facie case as the 23 Government concedes.

24 The second point is, it's important in this case 25 to really take a step back and look at the entire context,

1 as I think you agreed to. It's that our client was 2 stationed in China, he was afflicted with this Havana
3 syndrome, a very extreme illness and a severe situation. He 4 was then, against his will, placed indefinitely for 5 three years, and it continues to this day, in something 6 that's akin to a domestic desk duty.

7 Now, he was in diplomatic security. A good 8 analogy for this is thinking about when someone gets in 9 trouble in the police force and they say you're on desk 10 duty. That's essentially what has happened here with our 11 client, Mr. Lenzi, over the last three years.

12 And so with that in mind, I'm going to go through 13 the three counts. And I'm going to start actually with the 14 disparate treatment count, because I think that 15 contextualizes the case and allows Your Honor, I think, to 16 have the proper framework to analyze the counts and whether 17 they should proceed.

18 So for disparate treatment, the law says he has to 19 show he's disabled, he's otherwise qualified for employment, 20 and he nonetheless suffered an adverse employment action.
21 The first two about disability and being qualified for 22 employment, there's no dispute. We've repeatedly put counts 23 in the complaint showing that he's well qualified, he's 24 received great performance reviews over many years.

25 The only element that really is in dispute is the

1 third element of whether there's an adverse action. In this 2 case, there have been at least two such adverse actions.
3 Your Honor pointed to the first one, which is this 4 indefinite reassignment. He's been placed in this 5 employment purgatory for three years and ongoing, domestic 6 desk duty, and that's despite his ongoing request to be 7 moved overseas throughout the time.

8 It is black-letter law from the Burlington case 9 that reassignment with significantly different
10 responsibilities -- directly from the Supreme Court -- or a 11 decision causing significant change in benefits is an 12 adverse action. They never disputed that in their brief.
13 They seem to make new arguments today, but that was never 14 disputed.

15 And if you look at Section 2302 of the statute, 16 personnel action is a detailed transfer reassignment, a 17 decision concerning pay benefits or awards, or any other 18 significant change in duties or responsibilities. Right.

19 And so there's two reasons why the indefinite 20 reassignment to domestic desk duty is an adverse action.
21 First, it caused a significant change in compensation and 22 benefits; and second, it significantly altered Mr. Lenzi's 23 day-to-day job responsibilities.

24 THE COURT: But the respondents' argue that 25 it's -- you know, it's just not any compensation, it has to 1 be specifically salary.

2 MR. MEZGER: Yeah. And Your Honor, they did not 3 cite any case that stands for that specific proposition that 4 it's this specific salary, and the statutory language and 5 the Supreme Court language says benefits.

6 And the key here, Your Honor, is counsel mentioned 7 changes in like regional pay and things like that, you know, 8 if you have the same job in the United States. You've got 9 to remember, we've got to -- again, looking at the context, 10 he's a foreign service officer who is, you know, stationed 11 abroad, and with that comes a lot of extra benefits. Those 12 include pay for your kids' school, those include housing 13 benefits, those include hazard pay.

14 Now, maybe you can take the hazard pay, you know,
15 and put that in the different, you know, regions. Maybe. I 16 don't think so. But, you know, there are multiple layers of 17 benefits that Mr. Lenzi loses as a result of being shuttled, 18 and as counsel mentioned, it's called directed into an 19 assignment. Has been repeatedly directed into this 20 assignment.

21 And so that benefits piece alone shows there's an 22 adverse action. But we don't even have to go there, Your 23 Honor, because there's an independent basis, which is the 24 significant change in responsibilities. We've pleaded in 25 the complaint that he had language skills that were suitable

1 for these positions abroad, that he, you know, is someone 2 who really loves and enjoys this kind of overseas work. And 3 those come with certain responsibilities and duties.

4 And we've pleaded throughout the complaint that 5 his duties were diminished, and he was placed in a state 6 where, in our view of the case, they're trying to kind of 7 force him to want to quit because it makes his life not as 8 exciting and interesting as it would be if he were to be in 9 the standard responsibilities. And that's why the law
10 accounts for the diminishing of responsibilities and duties 11 and those sorts of things.

12 And we have multiple, you know, cites to the 13 record on that, you know, complaint. So on the 14 compensation, it's complaint paragraph 12, Note 4. The 15 benefits, complaints paragraphs 15 and 16. And in the 16 demotion of duties, it's complaint paragraph 8, complaint 17 paragraph 9, complaint paragraph 12.

18 So on this count, Your Honor, that, alone, is 19 sufficient for us to survive a motion to dismiss. And there 20 was no argument from counsel about exhaustion as to that 21 issue. So that, alone, gets us over the line.

22 Now, I will briefly address failure to promote, 23 which they also don't dispute. We've pleaded facts -- or at 24 least on the merits, I didn't hear much of a dispute. We've 25 pleaded facts that shows he was told he was going to be

1 promoted to FP-2. And FP-2 is better than FP-3. It's 2 somewhat counterintuitive. And he was told he's going to be 3 at FP-2, and here's an assignment where you're going to be 4 FP-2. Then he gets injured, he gets this radiation, you 5 know, or whatever causes the Havana syndrome, and then he's 6 moved and he never gets FP-2, despite being told in his 7 review he's going to get FP-2. And that's sort of -- you're 8 right on the cusp of it Mr. Lenzi, no, we're not going to 9 give it to you.

10 And to Your Honor's point about the temporal 11 aspect, for three years he's hasn't been promoted. And we 12 also pleaded details about how -- or at least mentioned in 13 our brief that typically these promotions occur within one 14 or two years. So that's circumstantial evidence that makes 15 our point. And they've also given him these stretch 16 assignments that are at an FP-2 level, but they're still 17 paying him and keeping him at FP-3 for purposes of his pay 18 and all of those sorts of things. So all of those things 19 are very significant.

20 Now, with regard to the exhaustion point, I want, 21 again, to take a step back. Because throughout the 22 Government's arguments, they've never mentioned the standard 23 for exhaustion. Right. There's a standard for that. And 24 one point I want to make sure is clear for the record, too, 25 is he filled out these complaints which, you know, are very 1 detailed, they're 150 pages. You know, he did his best.

2 But he did draft these on his own. I have that on authority
3 from my client. He did check a box that he had some family
4 friend lawyer that maybe he knew or something. But no
5 lawyer helped create these EEO complaints. So I think 6 that's an important context for Your Honor to have.

7 But, apart from that, we noted multiple cases from 8 the Fourth Circuit and from this Court, the Eastern District 9 of Virginia, that show that the standard is what is 10 reasonably expected to follow from the charge based on all 11 of the allegations that are pleaded.

12 There's also case law we cited in our brief that 13 says magic words are not required that they didn't respond
14 to. Because I think what the Government wants is a standard 15 where you have to say "failure to promote" or, you know, 16 "failure to accommodate," exact words.

17 THE COURT: Well, the case law says that you do 18 have to identify what type of discrimination you're talking 19 about, and that is one that is referred to specifically when 20 it's a failure to promote, and that's the allegation.

21 And I don't think that you need a lawyer to help 22 you come up with that claim because, you know, what he did 23 prepare is extensive and goes through, you know, the 24 allegations of what he said has happened to him. But in 25 those, he does not -- he never says they did not promote me;

1 he says that he was not assigned to an overseas --

2 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah. Thank you for that, Your 3 Honor. I will say, even if we get there, he actually did 4 say he wasn't promoted. He actually talked about this 5 issue.

6 THE COURT: Well, if he did, you didn't cite that 7 in your pleadings. Because what I read that you -- that you
8 did cite talks about -- it was a passing reference to what a 9 supervisor said that he should be promoted at some time.
10 And that, at some point, they stopped mentioning those 11 things, that something disappeared. But that's not saying 12 the same thing as they failed to promote me.

13 MR. SUAREZ: So, Your Honor, I appreciate your 14 comment. With your indulgence, I would say we cited a 15 couple places. So one was, I think you referenced DEX 1 at 16 78 which is where he does reference the supervisor saying 17 he's going to be promoted. And so I agree with you that 18 one, taken alone, probably is not enough.

19 I think what does get us over the line, again 20 under this standard, is if we look at DEX 1 at 80 that we 21 did cite in our brief. And that specific one did reference 22 the fact that things began to -- began to get worse, and 23 he -- they made no mentions of promotions and they stopped 24 doing that after he was afflicted with the disability.
25 So --

1 THE COURT: But that's not saying the same thing 2 as they failed to promote me, they stopped mentioning it in 3 my reviews. Because even if something is mentioned in a 4 review doesn't mean it's going to happen; it's a suggestion.
5 And even if the review, it appeared as a -- you know, like 6 this should happen.

7 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah. I think -- I think
8 respectfully that, you know, I guess we might have a 9 slightly different view of interpretation of that.

10 But, you know, regardless, on this particular 11 count, the disparate treatment count, we don't even need to 12 go to the exhaustion because of the fact of the indefinite 13 employment purgatory. So the failure to promote is a 14 separate issue. It doesn't matter for today's purposes in 15 terms of whether there's a permissible motion to dismiss.
16 You know, we do submit that there's enough to get across the 17 line, but we obviously respect Your Honor's position on 18 that.

19 So let me turn to the failure to accommodate 20 issue. And, again, focusing on the legal elements of that 21 claim. To establish a failure to accommodate, Mr. Lenzi 22 must show he was an individual with a disability; two, the 23 employer had notice of the disability; and three, with 24 reasonable accommodation, he could perform the essential
25 functions of the position and the employer refused to make

1 the accommodation.

2 What happened -- so here, again, the Government
3 doesn't dispute that Mr. Lenzi had a disability. Havana 4 syndrome has not come out of the Government's mouth a single 5 time, and that is the key here.

6 Number 2, the employer had notice of the 7 disability, and that was undisputed. There's no dispute on 8 that.

9 Number 3, with reasonable accommodation to perform 10 the essential functions, we've pleaded extensively about his 11 ability to perform the functions. And for most of these 12 positions he requested reassignment, he's got a Class 2 13 medical clearance, which means that the office assessed 14 whether he's qualified and assessed whether he could be 15 permitted to work there with accommodation, and they 16 determined that he could.

17 THE COURT: Let me focus you on this claim and 18 what I have the issue with.

19 In your complaint, you talk about how Mr. Lenzi 20 requested certain accommodations, and how those were given 21 to him. I believe he requested them, and he says that he 22 received those, and he was -- based on receiving those, he 23 was able to perform those duties.

24 My issue is that you are trying to call the 25 overseas assignment the accommodation, and that was never

1 requested as an accommodation. I don't even know if that 2 particular assignment could be requested as an accommodation
3 based on the meaning of accommodation. But even in what you 4 cite, I think it's at DE-1 page 6, "Consulate Frankfurt was 5 recommended to me by a State Department DRAD specialist as 6 the best overseas mission set up to handle DRAD 7 accommodations like mine."

8 So, again, it's evident, based on how he's 9 speaking about it, it's that these accommodations that he 10 received, which were -- let me see. I don't know where he 11 listed out all of the accommodations. But they included, 12 like, telework and something with the computer to help with 13 the light sensitivity and all of those things. And so those 14 are the accommodations. The overseas assignment is what he 15 prefers and wants based on his skill set, but that, in and 16 of itself, is not the accommodation.

17 MR. SUAREZ: I appreciate Your Honor's points.
18 And I will -- I'll concede at the threshold before I give 19 this response. This case doesn't fit into the typical 20 framework for a reassignment accommodation, and I think 21 giving you some context and stepping back will help the 22 response as you evaluate this.

23 The first point is, reassignments are an 24 accommodation in the statute. You probably are aware of 25 that, but just for the record, 42 USC 12111(9)(B).

1 Reassignments are an accommodation.

2 THE COURT: They can be.

3 MR. SUAREZ: Yes, absolutely.

4 THE COURT: Yes, they can be. Because he was 5 reassigned from his -- the position over in China --

6 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah.

7 THE COURT: -- back to the United States.

8 MR. SUAREZ: The fundamental key here is, and 9 admittedly, this case would be -- it's a unique fact 10 pattern. That's just candid for the record, it's a unique 11 fact pattern. But what we explain in our brief and what is 12 compelling here and why this claim should most certainly 13 proceed is because of the points Your Honor made before.

14 The Wirtes case that they initially cited and we 15 responded to, and then we didn't hear much of a reply, 16 right, it stands for the proposition that in the typical 17 case, the Government's trying to do reassignments because -- 18 and they're trying to put someone in a position they might 19 not like very much. And it's usually the plaintiffs 20 fighting against the reassignment, and that's why it's 21 usually an accommodation of last resort and why the case law 22 in the Fourth Circuit says "unusual circumstances call for 23 reassignment as an accommodation."

24 Well, this is sort of the reverse situation. It's 25 a very odd situation. Because of what Your Honor pointed

1 out, that he has been in this directed assignment for three 2 years, against his will, involuntary, that's exactly what 3 the Wirtes case and the Lowe's case we cited specifically
4 counsel against. The Fourth Circuit wants to make sure 5 people are not put in situations like Mark Lenzi. And those 6 cases, precedential Fourth Circuit opinions, stand very 7 strongly for that proposition. Again, no rebuttal on that 8 in reply from the Government.

9 And so it's in this context where, you know, if 10 you do not permit this claim to proceed, Your Honor, what 11 you're essentially allowing the Government to do is say, 12 well, we're going to just put him in a directed assignment 13 against his will. We're going to pick and choose some 14 accommodations. We'll give him some glasses, we'll give him 15 a typewriter, we'll give him a few things, but we're not 16 going to allow him to have the fundamental thing he always 17 had. And as you alluded to in referencing our DEX exhibits, 18 the PEX and DEX, he talked to his DRAD officer about these 19 accommodations. That's in the complaint.

20 THE COURT: But not about the overseas assignment 21 as an accommodation.

22 MR. SUAREZ: Well, Your Honor, I would submit on 23 that that --

24 THE COURT: And even in your brief at one point
25 you said he could have performed the duties of the Belgrade

1 job with accommodation. With accommodation. Not that that 2 was the accommodation. He could do that job with 3 accommodation. And that is said repeatedly through your -- 4 the EEO complaint.

5 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah. So I would go back. You know,
6 so on that, I -- I would submit that that is not a correct
7 legal proposition. If you look at the four elements of a 8 failure to accommodate claim, it's one, individual with a 9 disability; two, employer had notice of disability; three,
10 reasonable accommodation, he could perform the essential 11 functions; and four, the employer refused to make such 12 accommodation. He is asking for an accommodation so that he 13 can perform the duties that he always performed for a 14 decade. That is what he's asking to do.

15 THE COURT: But that's not what he says here. He 16 says I can do my job. That's what the argument is here.

17 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah.

18 THE COURT: The argument is -- here is, I 19 shouldn't have been removed from my overseas locations. Or 20 even if I was removed at the time, I should be able to do my 21 overseas assignments because I can do them if you give me 22 the same accommodations that you have given me here. That's 23 what his argument is. But the overseas -- this is not --

24 MR. SUAREZ: I think --

25 THE COURT: I understand -- I understand your

1 position on this.

2 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah. It's in -- my point is -- and 3 this is why I argued the disparate treatment first, because 4 I think these arguments are intertwined.

5 So we're at a motion to dismiss stage, and the 6 question is whether it was a plausible claim. So our view
7 is that the case should be permitted to proceed. If you
8 look at -- and I think -- I think Your Honor does 9 acknowledge he discussed, you know, these reassignments with 10 DRAD, with MED, it was all intertwined. And so the notion 11 that we would place form over function, so to speak, and say 12 he didn't say specifically I request that as a reasonable 13 accommodation, we submit that that would be contradictory to 14 the, you know, Fourth Circuit law about reasonably following 15 from the charge and all of that.

16 And so, again, given the posture, given the --

17 THE COURT: I understand your position.

18 MR. SUAREZ: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

19 So I'd say then -- I'll move on to retaliation, 20 because I think Your Honor understands that the four 21 positions we talked about were all denied on the merits in 22 terms of their -- in terms of their requested assignment, 23 and they were denied. So we don't have to go into detail 24 about that.

25 So on retaliation, I think Your Honor, again, hit

1 the nail on the head here in terms of where the rubber hits
2 the road. There was a lot -- you know, there's sort of two 3 issues. And I think we can survive the motion -- there's no 4 exhaustion on this count, first of all.

5 But second of all, if we go straight to the 6 Belgrade position that you were alluding to, that one alone 7 gets us across the line if we just look at the facts of that 8 and we walk through them.

9 On October 19th, 2020, there was a New York Times
10 article that quoted our client providing statements 11 regarding how the State Department handles his disability.
12 That's in paragraph 122, we cited it in Footnote 1 of our 13 opening brief. He was complaining, at least in part, about 14 disability discrimination.

15 Two weeks later, the Belgrade job was offered to 16 someone else on November 4th, 2020. And that's at 17 paragraph 65. Then he was in an assignment challenge called 18 The Shootout in the State Department, and he submitted 19 documentation showing that he's medically qualified for this 20 position on November 10th, 2020. That's in paragraph 66.
21 But then within four hours of submitting that saying, hey, I 22 can do this position, I talked to the embassy, he was 23 demoted from Class 1 medical clearance to Class 5. This was 24 the only time that that happened. He ultimately got 25 Class 2, but really quickly they demoted him to that

1 Class 5. So that was just long enough he didn't get the 2 position. And then that timing alone, that suspicious 3 timing of two weeks was enough. We cited the Jones case, we 4 cited the Ali cases.

5 And then if that were not enough, Your Honor 6 alluded to something else, which is important, which is 7 paragraph 69 of the complaint where we pleaded that 8 Andrew Kaleczyc, who was his career development officer.
9 This is the guy who was supposed to be helping his career,
10 but our allegations are that he was actually affirmatively
11 trying to hurt our client's career. He sent an action memo 12 that -- I'm reading from the paragraph right now that 13 advised Director General -- sorry, Director General Perez -- 14 he drafted an action memo to Director General Perez advising
15 her to deny Lenzi's request. His memo cited Mr. Lenzi's 16 disability and states that he regularly conducts media
17 interviews which are widely reported around the world, 18 referring to Mr. Lenzi's public comments about his 19 disability and the ANC's retaliatory acts against him.

20 So that, you know, apart from the suspicious 21 timing, confirms that we have a plausible claim of 22 retaliation. It's circumstantial evidence that there was 23 a -- a nefarious motive on the part of the agency based on 24 his advocacy public statements, you know, about the -- about 25 the disability discrimination. And so, for those reasons

1 alone, we feel that the retaliation claim should not be 2 dismissed.

3 Your Honor also noted some points about the 4 continuing pattern of discrimination over many years, which 5 we agree with. You know, there are multiple -- you know, 6 there are multiple attempts to file EEO complaints and the 7 seriatim denial of every position, you know, might be 8 coincidental after one, but after four or five, you start to 9 see a pattern. You know, so we feel that there is a 10 continuing pattern of retaliation based on that, and those 11 kind of claims can be cognizable as well. But, again, 12 Belgrade alone gets us there.

13 And then we also discussed the specifics of the 14 Warsaw position, January 28, 2021, medical clearance. Then 15 he filed the EEO complaint February 5th, 2021, and the 16 Warsaw position was denied just six days later. The case 17 law says when you have that kind of timing, that in and of 18 itself is enough. So that's another independent basis for 19 surviving on that.

20 So does Your Honor have any further questions on 21 retaliation?

22 THE COURT: I do not.

23 MR. SUAREZ: Okay. So then I'll just go to the 24 final count, the First Amendment issue.

1 and I might as well just get straight to the point on a 2 couple issues you raised. Number 1 is, you know, we 3 understand Your Honor's point regarding in the count itself, 4 it referenced monetary damages. You know, we would submit 5 that the prayer for relief covers --

6 THE COURT: I'm even looking at the prayer for 7 relief, and I'm saying the relief that you have requested
8 there does not appear to go to your First Amendment 9 argument.

10 MR. SUAREZ: I see. Okay. I appreciate the 11 clarification.

12 I think some of it does, and obviously there's the 13 catch-all, any other relief the Court deems just improper, 14 that's in there as well. And so, you know, our view is 15 that, you know, that would encompass, you know, injunctions
16 and issues relating to retaliation pertaining to public 17 statements, not retaliating if he goes on 60 -- he's been on 18 60 Minutes, he's been in the New York Times, all these sorts
19 of things. So we do believe that this does encompass, you 20 know, it's -- it also talks about ordering defendant to 21 permit employees to reference their disability and --

22 THE COURT: But in the -- but when they're doing 23 their comments for employee evaluation reports, that --

24 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah. So there's another one that 25 says "enjoin defendant from classifying employees with

1 overcomplement." That could -- you know, there could be 2 retaliation to classifying employees as an overcomplement as 3 a result of --

4 THE COURT: I'm speaking to your First Amendment
5 claim.

6 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah. Yeah. No. And I guess my 7 point is is that I think those -- because I take -- your 8 point is well taken about -- that some of them may not seem 9 to go to it. But I think ones like enjoining the 10 overcomplement goes to both. Because you can see a 11 situation where other employees advocate on the 60 Minutes, 12 advocate on New York Times and these things. And there may 13 be situations where they don't necessarily talk about the 14 disability discrimination. Perhaps they talk about, you 15 know, issues relating to directed radiation, perhaps they 16 talk about other issues.

17 THE COURT: But this is -- this has nothing to do 18 with media statements; this is specifically referencing what 19 employees can say in their employee evaluation reports. And 20 it gives a list, and then behind it is a list of items that 21 they should be free to list in their employee evaluation 22 reports.

23 MR. SUAREZ: Yeah. No. And I --

24 THE COURT: Because I think what --

25 MR. SUAREZ: I understand that, which is why --

1 THE COURT: Because I think what you're doing -- 2 we can't do amendment through, you know, these types of 3 pleadings --

4 MR. SUAREZ: No. No. No.

5 THE COURT: -- and arguments in court; it has to 6 be here.

7 MR. SUAREZ: I understand. And actually what I 8 was saying is I went off of that particular one. What I was 9 focusing on was J, just to give you an example. Because J 10 talks about enjoining defendant from continuing to classify 11 as overcomplement. And that could have a nexus to First 12 Amendment activity; not just to necessarily the 13 disability-related activity.

14 THE COURT: I understand your position.

15 MR. SUAREZ: So -- okay. So but I appreciate Your 16 Honor's indulgence in that.

17 And because, you know, we have obviously requested
18 any dismissal to be without prejudice, I'll just briefly 19 touch on whether there can be jurisdiction to this claim, to 20 the extent Your Honor has a view on the prayer for relief.

21 Our view is that with respect to equitable or 22 declaratory relief, there is no sovereign immunity. We've 23 cited numerous cases from numerous circuits that confirm 24 that.

25 And then with regard to the -- the sort of notion

1 of the Foreign Service Act preempting, we explain that in 2 our response brief that under the CSRA, this case is 3 properly here as a mixed case. And under the FSA, if you
4 look at the statutory scheme, cases like this would also go 5 to District Court under like 22 USC, I believe it's 2140 or 6 2139, some of those provisions. And so as a result -- sorry
7 4139. 4139 and 4140 22 USC permit Foreign Service Act 8 claims to go. And in their opening brief, they treated the 9 CSRA and FSA as kind of being analogous and similar, and 10 then they kind of backed off that and went to FSA only for 11 the final thing.

12 And then we note, too, that there are cases like 13 Garcetti v. Ceballos from the Supreme Court, 547 US 410, 14 that public employees do not surrender their First Amendment 15 rights.

16 And then I think it's important to talk about 17 Elgin for a moment because Elgin, which they relied on 18 heavily, it specifically says on page 10, "the CSRA does not 19 foreclose all judicial review of petitioner's Constitutional 20 claims, but merely directs that the judicial review shall 21 occur in the Federal circuit." So that case was largely 22 about what the right forum should be, and that was an MSPB 23 and, you know, other situations.

24 So, again, because they don't dispute that we're 25 properly in District Court, assuming Your Honor agrees with

1 us that there is a right to equitable and declaratory relief 2 where sovereign immunity has been waived, we do submit that 3 there's a cognizable claim here. And so -- you know, and 4 there's plenty of evidence of a retaliation. There's no 5 12(b)(6) argument on this count.

6 And so we would submit that to the extent Your 7 Honor is inclined to dismiss that count, we would seek 8 permission to amend, per Your Honor's guidance to the extent 9 that you believe that we can establish jurisdiction with a 10 more properly pleaded complaint.

11 So unless -- and -- oh, I guess one last argument 12 they made was they made an exhaustion argument on that as 13 well. There are plenty of citations that show that he 14 talked about First Amendment retaliation in his EEO
15 complaint.

16 So, for example, he talked about it DEX-2 at 169,
17 DEX-2 at 8, PEX-2 at 26 to 29, DEX-2 at 5, DEX-1 at 15, 18 DEX-1 at 16. And all of these reference him talking to the 19 New York Times. One actually says "the Bureau of Diplomatic 20 Security has retaliated against me for the negative press it 21 has received from media outlets such as 60 Minutes and the 22 New York Times." And that's the one at DEX-2 at 169. So we 23 believe we've exhausted that as well.

24 THE COURT: Was that just a general reference, 25 though, to media coverage or indicating the coverage that he

1 participated in?

2 MR. SUAREZ: It's referencing the stuff he 3 participated in. Actually, one of the cites we provided is 4 one of the New York Times articles itself in the 5 administrative complaint. So he put some of that in the 6 record that he submitted. So we think that's significant.

7 And the very last point I'll say before I sit 8 down, Your Honor, is that we understand that -- you know, 9 the position that some of these claims obviously do relate 10 to disability, some of these public statements, specifically 11 disability. But there is more of a general issue of public
12 concern with regard to the Havana syndrome that Mr. Lenzi's 13 been talking about. And so there's not a one-to-one 14 correspondence between all of the public advocacy and the 15 disability discrimination. It's part of it, but it's not 16 all of it. And so that's why we submit that there shouldn't 17 be preemption with regard to the First Amendment claim. We 18 feel it's part and parcel of the overall purpose of facts 19 that needs to proceed in this case.

20 So unless Your Honor has any other questions, I 21 thank you for your time, and I submit the case. Thank you.

22 THE COURT: Thank you.

23 MS. YANG: Thank you, Your Honor. I have just a 24 few brief high-level points to make.

25 So the first overarching point I think is to 1 underscore that, you know, on a motion to dismiss at the 2 pleading stage, each claim that a plaintiff identifies in 3 his complaint has to be plausibly pled. If it's not, it has 4 to be dismissed. And so how the Court comes out on, you 5 know, failure to accommodate or disability discrimination or 6 retaliation or the First Amendment claim is absolutely 7 critical to understanding what claims are allowed to proceed 8 past the pleading stage.

9 And similarly with respect to the subparts of each 10 of those individual claims, so whether, you know, under 11 disability discrimination we're talking about failure to 12 promote or non-selection, how the Court comes out on each of 13 those -- on whether each of those aspects is properly pled 14 is absolutely critical to understand at the dismissal stage.

15 And, again, even breaking it out even further,
16 whether the Court believes that specific adverse actions 17 have been pled, whether it's the Belgrade position or the 18 Warsaw position or the Athens position, so on and so forth, 19 each of those, again, has to be plausibly pled. So that's 20 my first overall point.

21 The second is that, you know, at their core, 22 discrete act disability and retaliatory claims are discrete 23 act claims, they are disparate treatment claims. There's no
24 such thing as a continuing violation of a disparate 25 treatment claim. The Supreme Court in the Morgan case made

1 that abundantly clear. And so the notion that they have -- 2 that there's this indefinite reassignment as an adverse 3 action, that's not a thing, that's not a claim under the 4 disparate treatment discrete act framework the plaintiff has 5 brought his claims under.

6 The next thing I would mention is that I heard 7 some argument on the failure to promote about going to the 8 exhaustion point. Your Honor, the standard is in our 9 briefs. Exhaustion is what's in the charge and what a 10 reasonable investigation would uncover from the things in 11 the charge. I don't think there's any reasonable dispute 12 that failure to promote is nowhere in the charge asserted as 13 a claim. It certainly did not continue to the end of the 14 administrative proceedings where plaintiff alleges the very 15 scope of what his claims actually were. We see that they 16 don't include failure to promote. But even the other part 17 can -- you know, what a reasonable investigation can 18 uncover.

19 As I mentioned at the outset, within the foreign 20 service, promotion and assignment are completely separate.
21 They have totally different decision-makers, totally 22 different processes. So I don't think there's really, you 23 know, a good-faith way to say that investigation into 24 assignment decisions could reasonably expect to lead to 25 investigation to promotion decisions.

1 On the failure to accommodate piece, I think Your 2 Honor understands our position on that, you know, so I won't
3 belabor the point. Clearly he didn't request overseas
4 assignment as an accommodation. He couldn't have either 5 because the law is unequivocal that an accommodation under 6 the Rehabilitation Act has to address limitations associated 7 with a disability.

8 Overseas assignment doesn't address -- isn't 9 alleged to address any of the limitations associated with 10 the plaintiff's disability. I didn't hear any response on 11 that piece -- on that critical piece in the reply just now.

12 Also, you know, we responded to plaintiff's 13 citation to Wirtes and the reassignment point at page 5 of 14 our reply just so Your Honor has that citation ready.

15 On retaliation, the plaintiff's argument focused, 16 again, on the same things that he identified in his 17 opposition brief. We fully addressed each of those points 18 in our reply brief, so I'll refer the Court to that portion 19 of our reply brief on that.

20 And finally, on the preclusion point, we 21 absolutely dispute the First Amendment claim is properly 22 before the District Court in this action, just to be clear.
23 The Foreign Service Act sets out a very clear path to 24 District Court review, one that plaintiff does not allege 25 he's followed, one in which he undisputedly has not

1 followed. And his attempt to say that he repeatedly 2 referenced First Amendment activity in his EEO complaint is 3 misplaced. Because as I mentioned at the outset, a mixed 4 case complaint is not available by statute to a foreign 5 service employee. That exclusion is in the statute at 5 USC
6 7511(B)(6). It expressly says this section does not apply 7 to foreign service employees. And so the claim is 8 precluded.

9 For all those reasons, we would request that the 10 claims be dismissed, and that the failure to accommodate 11 claim be dismissed with prejudice because no amendment can 12 cure the deficiencies, that the First Amendment claim be 13 dismissed without prejudice for lack of jurisdiction for the 14 reasons stated today and in our briefs. Thank you very 15 much.

16 MR. SUAREZ: May I make one short point? Okay.
17 We'll be one minute.

18 So the fundamental point, going back to the 19 failure to accommodate, the ostensible basis the Government 20 had for putting him in the domestic desk duty in the first 21 place was because of his disability. That is why he was 22 removed from these positions.

23 And so as Your Honor evaluates this, ask yourself, 24 is it appropriate for someone to do that and then disallow 25 him from proceeding a claim to be made return to that

1 position when the basis for him being removed was because,
2 allegedly, he didn't perform the essential functions. Now 3 he's saying he can, reassign me there, and they're denying 4 it. That is a textbook claim, and that's all intertwined 5 with what he put in his complaint and everything under the 6 standard. So we would submit that's a notion that it's 7 disconnected from his disability. That's a fiction that the 8 Government created itself.

9 And then, finally, I would just say with regard to 10 the First Amendment again, the case is properly here in the 11 District Court. They don't dispute that. And there's no
12 case that says the Foreign Service Act precludes a 13 constitutional claim to move forward. So we submit that the 14 claim can proceed and there can be jurisdiction or is 15 jurisdiction.

16 Thank you, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Thank you.

18 This matter is before the court on the defendants' 19 motion to dismiss. And at this stage, I'm just looking at 20 whether or not the plaintiff in the complaint set forth a 21 claim of relief that is plausible on its face. And I'm to 22 draw all inferences in the light that's most favorable to 23 the plaintiff.

24 And here what I'm -- in Count 1, the failure to 25 accommodate. The threshold issue here is whether or not

1 this claim was exhausted. I understand plaintiff's
2 position, but I find that it was not. Because in the EEO 3 complaint, plaintiff never raised or alleged that the 4 overseas assignment was an accommodation request. It was 5 presented as I stated, that he could do the assignment there 6 with his accommodations. And so as a matter of law, I'm 7 granting the motion as to Count 1, and that claim is 8 dismissed.

9 As to Count 2, the retaliation. And here the 10 plaintiff alleges retaliation based on a number of things.
11 His complaints to supervisors about assignments to his 12 foreign post, or not having assignments to those foreign 13 posts, disclosure of medical conditions, requested and 14 received accommodations, and the filing of the EEO 15 complaints. Those are all bases that you allege in the 16 complaint as indicative of retaliation.

17 And here -- we didn't have specific argument on it 18 here today, but there was in the briefs, and the disclosure 19 of medical conditions in general are not protected activity.

20 In regards to plaintiff's general complaints to 21 supervisors about not giving or receiving overseas 22 assignments, general complaints to supervisors aren't 23 protected activity either. And as the complaint reads, it 24 alleges that he complained about the failure to get overseas 25 assignments after years of exemplary service. And that

1 reads nothing more than like a general complaint to a 2 supervisor. And so you haven't, at this stage, alleged any 3 more. So the motion to dismiss is going to be granted as to 4 that argument, but I'm going to give you leave to amend.
5 Because perhaps there are other statements that he made to 6 supervisors that would be actionable or would be considered 7 protected activity.

8 But as opposed to the requested and received 9 accommodations and the filing of those EEO complaints, the 10 defendants are alleging that those claims fail because 11 there's no causal connection between the request for 12 accommodations or protected activity. And that also there 13 are no factual allegations that could -- from which we can 14 possibly infer denial of assignments were the result of a 15 retaliatory animus. And I disagree for all the reasons that 16 I was talking about earlier.

17 I do think that there are sufficient facts and 18 inferences here in the light most favorable to the plaintiff 19 that there was retaliation in this case, and I'm not getting 20 into the merits, but there were multiple things that were 21 alleged here. The overcomplement status being in there for 22 the three years. The fact that he was denied his overseas
23 request in 2020 and 2021. The time period between those EEO
24 complaints, the June, July and August complaints, and then 25 those that -- the later decisions in October and November.

1 I do -- I'm not going to go through all the facts
2 here, but I do think when I read the complaint in the light
3 most favorable to the plaintiff and draw all reasonable 4 inferences, that there is a retaliation claim here that 5 should go forward. And so I'm going to -- the motion in 6 that respect is granted in part and denied in part. It's 7 granted as to -- as I said, to the complaints about the 8 supervisors, as well as the general disclosures of medical 9 conditions, but it's denied in other respects.

10 Then in terms of Count 3, the disparate treatment.
11 There, the allegations are the claim from plaintiff's 12 prospect it's about the failure to promote, that he was 13 treated different than employees who were not disabled, the 14 fact that he was refused for overseas assignments and his 15 designation and continued designation in the overcomplement 16 status.

17 The failure to promote was not exhaustive. I 18 understand plaintiff's position on that, but it was not 19 something that was identified in the EEO complaint. But as 20 to the balance, I do think for all of the reasons that, you 21 know, I've referenced earlier in some of my questions that 22 the facts here are sufficient for the claim to go forward on 23 disparate treatment here. And so, again, the motion is 24 granted in certain parts and denied in certain respects.

25 But as to Count 4, you have pled for monetary

1 damages in reference to your First Amendment arguments, and 2 you talk about, well, I do ask for other relief. But I'm 3 not going to imagine what other relief could be here and 4 relate it to -- and what's related to the First Amendment.
5 Because right now on these pleadings, it is not here. And 6 so the motion to dismiss is granted as to Count 4 as well.

7 All exceptions preserved, and I'll issue an order.

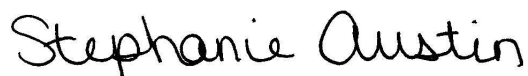

8 MR. MEZGER: Thank you, Your Honor.

9 THE COURT: I thank counsel for your briefs and 10 your advocacy here today. Thank you. We're adjourned.
